Sexual Misconduct: Resources for Student Survivors

Seattle University is committed to providing a safe and nondiscriminatory campus. The University takes all allegations of sexual misconduct seriously, and is committed to providing information, resources, and clear direction to all members of the community so that, together, we can help prevent and address this conduct. This handout provides basic information about resources and options available to students who experience sexual misconduct. Please understand, however, that this one-sheet handout cannot and does not address every aspect of incidents of sexual misconduct. Supplementary information can be found on-line at <http://www.seattleu.edu/sexual-misconduct/>. In addition, all the on-campus contacts listed on this handout are available to provide additional information and guidance in navigating the various resources and options.

We Are Here to Help. Seattle University provides many resources to assist and support Seattle University students who experience sexual harassment, sexual assault, domestic violence, dating violence, stalking, or other sexual misconduct, regardless of where or when it occurs, or by whom. Below you will find information about these on-campus resources, and on page 1 you will find a more comprehensive list with contact information for both on-campus and local off-campus resources.

Confidential Medical and Support Services. Seattle University encourages those who wish to receive confidential medical and/or support services to seek assistance from the following on-campus confidential resources, and/or from off-campus confidential resources, which include Harborview Medical Center and Harborview Center for Sexual Assault and Traumatic Stress. Please note that Seattle University Public Safety is available 24 hours a day to discuss these resources and to provide transportation, as desired.

Counseling and Psychological Services (CAPS)

Pavilion 120 | (206) 296-6090 | Appointment Hours: M-F, 8am–12pm/1pm-4:30pm; Urgent Hours: M-F, 10am/3pm

CAPS counselors provide supportive counseling and consultation for students coping with the impact of sexual harassment, sexual assault, domestic violence, dating violence, stalking, or other sexual misconduct. Counseling sessions are a safe, accepting, and confidential place for survivors to work through any stage of the healing process. Counselors can also assist survivors with identifying other on-campus and off-campus resources. Services are provided free of charge to students.

Student Health Center

Bellarmine Hall 107 | (206) 296-6300 | M-F, 7am - 5pm

The Student Health Center is a confidential medical clinic available to all students. It can provide a medical examination as well as STD and pregnancy testing.

Campus Ministry

Student Center 120 | (206) 296-6075 | M-F, 8am - 4:30pm

Campus Ministry is a place where students can confidentially talk to a priest, member of the clergy, or campus minister who is serving as a pastoral counselor.

Harborview Medical Center (HMC) / Harborview Center for Sexual Assault and Traumatic Stress (HCSATS)

HMC Emergency Dept.: 325 Ninth Ave., Seattle, 98104; HCSATS: 401 Broadway, Suite 2075, Seattle, 98104 | (206) 744-1600

The HMC Emergency Department provides 24-hour confidential emergency care after sexual assault for evidence collection and medical care. Through HCSATS, survivors can receive follow-up medical care, evidence-based counseling to assist survivors to recover from the trauma of sexual assault, and other relevant services. For more information, go to: www.hcsats.org.

Options for Reporting and Seeking Protection. Seattle University also empowers students who experience sexual misconduct to know they have options to address the conduct through our student conduct process and/or through the legal system. For reports to law enforcement, Seattle University Public Safety is available to provide transportation and to assist with making the report, as desired. Reports to the University can be made by contacting any of the contacts listed under “Options for Reporting and Seeking Protection” on page 1. Please know that a reporting party’s privacy will be respected and that only as needed will identities or details be shared with those who need to know in order to support the student and to address the situation through the University’s processes. If the student wishes to maintain confidentiality or requests that no investigation be conducted or disciplinary action taken, the University’s general policy is to respect such requests unless certain overriding factors are present related to the University’s obligation to provide a safe, non-discriminatory environment for all members of the University community, including the reporting party. In all cases, regardless of whether a formal complaint is pursued, these contacts are also available to assist with meeting the University’s commitment to taking prompt and effective measures to support and protect students, such as shielding them from ongoing contact with an individual. (Appropriate measures are determined on a case-by-case basis, and may include interim actions such as academic accommodations, housing changes, or no communication directives.) More information about filing a report and about the student conduct process can be found on-line at <http://www.seattleu.edu/sexual-misconduct/>. Lastly, please know that retaliation because a person has filed a good faith complaint alleging sexual misconduct or participated in an investigation or other related procedure related to such a complaint is strictly prohibited, and the University will respond promptly to investigate any claims of retaliation.
