Identity in the Shadow of the Giant: How the Rise of China is Changing Taiwan investigates the implications of the global ascent of China on cross-Strait relations and the identity of Taiwan as a democratic state. Examining an array of factors that affect identity formation, Dr. Li, Associate Professor of the Political Science Department, director of the Asian Studies Program at Seattle University, and editor of the Journal of Chinese Political Science, will discuss how the authors consider the influence of the rapid military and economic rise of China on Taiwan's identity.
